Program

AUDIENCE: GRADES 10-12 TEACHERS ARE ENCOURAGED TO ATTEND.

Project-based learning can encourage creativity, innovation, and collaboration. It can also accommodate a variety of learning styles and strengths. However, if we're not careful, project-based learning can become more about the project and less about the learning!

By focusing on learner outcomes and putting assessment front and centre, project-based learning can be an accurate and motivating way to meet curricular goals while actively engaging students. Keep the focus where it needs to be – on the learning.

This learning opportunity is being offered through a grant from Alberta Education.

Presenters

Pat Lore

is a Field Services Facilitator with the Alberta Assessment Consortium, an independent, not-for-profit education partner in the province, advocating for sound classroom assessment practices. Pat is seconded to AAC from her position as a teacher and consultant with Edmonton Public Schools. Currently, Pat works with teachers and leaders at a school and district level across the province, building capacity in the area of classroom assessment practice to support learning for all students.
